OUTLOOK

2009 was an exciting year for Danish cinema. With ticket sales reaching more than 14 million, this once again confirms the Danish public's dedication to cinema. At the same time, Danish films were greatly challenged at home. The huge success of the Swedish Millennium trilogy contributed to the lowest Danish domestic share in years: 17%. For a country with a ten year average domestic share of 26%, neither the industry nor the national film agency found much comfort in the fact that the beneficiary of the Danish windfall was our otherwise friendly neighbour Sweden, nor the fact that a Danish director, scriptwriter and photographer took part in the production of the audience darling of 2009.

On the international festival circle, however, Danish films continued to perform well. A number of films were represented in competitions at major festivals. Titles include Antichrist, Little Soldier and others. On the documentary circuit, Anders Østergaard's Burma VJ swept away most of the major awards. This, together with other Danish entries, continues to signal a new golden age for Danish documentaries.

In many ways 2010 is a year of particular importance for Danish cinema. The Danish parliament is set to pass a new film policy accord for the period 2011-2014, an accord that will heavily influence the possibilities for the Danish industry and for Danish artistic success in the years to come. In January of this year, the national Danish film agency, the DFI, put forward its film policy proposal, 'Set Film Free', addressing the major challenges for Danish cinema. These have been defined over the last two years in close cooperation with 250 stakeholders from the film sector. The proposal emphasizes three challenges:

- The filmmaking economy is under pressure in Denmark as in the rest of Europe. Everywhere, home video revenues are diminishing and the contribution from pay-TV shrinking. Meanwhile piracy is on the rise, and the theft of films on the internet is increasingly challenging the revenue streams.
- The Film-accord for 2007-2010 heavily increased the influence of the national broadcasters on Danish films. Influence from television has become a de facto right of veto, with too much attention being paid to TV-programming and ratings, rather than artistic ambitions or sound sales strategies for the cinema-going public.
- Heavy state regulations focusing on process and details rather than results and artistic goals tend to lock in the DFI-support schemes and make it too difficult for the agency to react with force and agility in a rapidly changing market.

Other challenges for the 2011-2014 accord include; Digital Cinema, VOD (Video on Demand), digital archives, a strengthened effort in the field of media literacy for children and youth, new marketing support schemes, a strengthened international effort, refocusing the talent scheme New Danish Screen, and many other minor or major efforts that constitute the broad palette of national Danish film policy.

The DFI is pleased, that many, both stakeholders and key political players, have indicated a high degree of concurrence with the DFI priorities in the film policy proposal. Though interests differ and objectives vary, there seems to be an unprecedented degree of consensus, that all good efforts should come together to ensure that filmmaking in Denmark can continue its successful development.

The role of the DFI is neither to make films, nor necessarily to set specific artistic goals. It is however vital, that the national film agency ensures the widest possible framework for creative talents and competent film merchants. They – not the DFI – get to play the game. Hopefully, the new film accord will make it possible to ensure that the playing field, is big, well tended and level – and the DFI looks forward to Danish filmmakers continuing to twist our cultural self-understanding and marking Denmark as a vibrant film nation.

BUDGET

The national film agency, the Danish Film Institute (DFI), operates under the Ministry of Culture (Film Act, 1997). Since 1999, the financial framework and the political objectives behind Danish film policy have been laid down in four-year Film Policy Accords by the Danish Parliament. Next period will be 2011-2014.

FEATURE FICTION FILM PRODUCTION

The DFI is responsible for supporting and promoting the art of filmmaking through several schemes. The DFI Production & Development Department administers the Consultant Scheme, primarily aimed at feature films with an artistic and experimental potential, and the 60/40 Scheme, primarily aimed at feature films with a commercial potential. In 2008, the DFI introduced a new pilot scheme for low budget fiction features.

THE DANISH THEATRICAL MARKET

In Denmark, the top 20 feature films represent more than 50% of the total theatrical market value. American releases tend to dominate the top 20, but last year the Swedish Millennium series, based on the Stieg Larsson thriller, took first place.

The market split reflects the long-term viability of Danish films in a market dominated by American releases. Since 1999, almost half of all Danish releases have sold more than 100,000 tickets at Danish cinemas. In the same period, only 19% of all American releases crossed that threshold. The figures and table below indicate the number of films in different intervals.

For a number of years, Denmark has boasted a consistently high market share for Danish feature films in the home market – 26%, on average, since 2000. 2009 was an exception with a low domestic market share.

FOREIGN MARKETS

The European market is obviously important not only for Denmark but for a lot of European countries. In the 2003-2009 period, on average, more than 50% of the Danish features were sold abroad. The DFI's Festival Unit supports the promotion and marketing of Danish films abroad.

Compared to other European countries, Danish films perform outstandingly well in the national market. For several years, Denmark has had the second highest national market share in Europe, bested only by France.

DFI CINEMATHEQUE & COLLECTION

The Cinematheque features three theatres, screening Danish and international films that would not otherwise be shown in Danish cinemas. The DFI Library is Denmark's research library for film and television. The DFI Film Archive keeps more than 30,000 titles in cold storage, preserving the films for future generations. The DFI's Video on Demand facility is a new programme for schools and libraries across Denmark.
