ABOUT ANEMONECRAFTS

Lies, originally from Belgium, and Kimberlee, from the USA, became fast friends due to their mutual love of crochet, knitting, sewing, textiles, and all things craft. They both live in central Auckland, New Zealand, and meet regularly to craft, chat, bake, oogle over beautiful toddler Lieveke, and organise their Craftwerk stall, Anemone. Email us, we'd love to hear from you.

kraftbomb: go team CRAFT

well I first must say that my internet has been semi down for the last week. We got switched over to a new network and its been funny ever since- disconnecting every 1 minute on the dot and then slowing way way down, then speeding up too fast for our modem to handle. (but don't worry, the problem is being fixed and we are getting major discounts and a new modem from our internet service provider, so they aren't really that bad) ANYWAY, Posting has been tricky and reading blogs has been even worse. Thanks for bearing with me loyal friends and still

Apron Tutorial Featuring Dogwood Fabrics

I was once again a very busy lady on Friday. I'm not sure where all the focus and energy came from, but I'm sure glad it did, because I knocked this darling apron out without a hitch.

This is my first apron... I know how popular they are these days, and I've seen some wonderfully complex, fancy and detailed examples out there. While I don't pretend to have a very complicated pattern, I was pretty darn proud of myself for my pattern-making and sewing prowess on my first attempt. You can download the .pdf tutorial here- and it will reside in my downloads tab over on the left

lunes 20 de octubre de 2008

Por fin es lunes!

Desde que voy a las quedadas de Bcnknits los lunes ya no son iguales, y para quien quiera comprobarlo el próximo lunes día 27 de octubre nos podrá encontrar a partir de las 18:00h en la planta baja de la Horxateria Valenciana (calle Aribau esquina Diputación).

Este lunes no fuimos tantos como el pasado, pero la verdad es que haciendo el recuento salen más personas de las que parecían estar sentadas en la mesa. Hoy por orden alfabético:

Albis volvía a traer el jersey que le está tejiendo a su padre con la admirada Katia Merino Sport en color granate y elegida por el destinatario, comprada en Llanes Travessera.

Belen está últimamente muy productiva y sino mirad lo avanzado que estaba el bolso que decidió plagiar de Martins el pasado viernes en ovillos. El lunes que viene seguro que lo tendrá terminado! A parte

An update of autumn at the farm. Enjoy these photos!

Autumn is very colorful this year in the Northeast, and one of the nicest things to do in the fall is to drive through the countryside and observe the spectacular, vivid shades of leaves.

Do you ever wonder why certain kinds of trees put on such a brilliant display? Well, during the growing season, most tree leaves are green because of the presence of a pigment called chlorophyll. Chlorophyll is used by plants to capture sunlight needed for photosynthesis, the process that enables the plants to manufacture their own food. The chlorophyll content is so high during the summer months that its strong green color masks all other pigments that are present in the leaf. As the days grow shorter and temperatures get cooler, chlorophyll production slows and eventually stops, exposing the other hues.

The other pigments are mainly carotenoids, which provide yellow, orange, and brown colors. Anthocyanins, which give the red and purple colors, are produced in the fall, in response to autumnal bright light and sugars in the leaf.

Autumn color is greatly influenced by temperature and moisture. A rainy summer followed by crisp, sunny days seems to bring on the best show of colors. But nature is mysterious, and fall is often gorgeous even when there has been a drought.
