

In partnership with NYCDOE, CUNY is pleased to provide DOE teachers with an opportunity to earn a tuition-free 15 credit micro-credential in mathematics content and pedagogy. This micro-credential will provide graduate coursework focusing on instructional practice and content that is critical to student success in Algebra I and beyond.

| Why should I consider the Algebra for All micro-credential?

- Your school is an Algebra for All school. This coursework is aligned with Algebra for All professional learning sessions.
- Support algebraic thinking in all grades. Learn how Algebraic thinking is introduced in early childhood and developed over time to support deep conceptual understanding.
- It might help you qualify for a salary differential. The micro-credential will provide you 15 credits tuition free, focused in a subject area.
- You receive a verifiable digital credential from CUNY. You will receive a digital badge that verifies that you have completed this micro-credential.
- Join a great community of educators. Meet and take class with motivated teachers from outside your building who teach different grades and have different math backgrounds.
- You are a special education teacher or ELL specialist. This micro-credential provides critical content and pedagogy for ELL and special education teachers who support students with mathematics.
- You can earn CTLE credit.

| How do I get started?

- First we encourage you to discuss the opportunity with your colleagues. If you co-teach with a special education teacher, prioritize math on your CEP, or have other teachers you collaborate with on math – consider applying with those teachers and sharing your plans with administrators.
- Meet current teachers in the micro-credential and learn more on November 21st, 2019 - 4:30-6:00p

| What does this cost?

Tuition and fees for current NYCDOE teachers will be paid by CUNY, however, textbooks for courses are not covered. Participants will be responsible for purchasing books and materials for each course.

| What is a micro-credential?

Micro-credentials verify, validate, and attest that specific skills and/or competencies have been achieved. They differ from traditional degrees and certificates in that they are generally offered in shorter or more flexible timespans and tend to be more narrowly focused.
