As of Dec. 18, 2017, these 10 movies had the highest domestic box-office grosses during the 2017 calendar year, according to IMDbPro's box-office reporting service, Box Office Mojo.

"Remakes, reboots and comic books reigned supreme at the box office in 2017, but one of the biggest surprises of the big screen this year is It," said Keith Simanton, IMDb's Senior Film Editor. "The frightening adaptation of the 1986 book by Stephen King is IMDb's Top Movie of the year (as determined by page views), and It's popularity also launched two of the film's stars onto our list of Top 10 Breakout Stars of 2017: Bill Skarsgård ranked No. 1 with his portrayal of Pennywise the Clown (he also ranked No. 5 on IMDb's list of Top 10 Stars of 2017), and Sophia Lillis, who captivated audiences as Beverly Marsh, charted at No. 7."

"Seven of IMDbPro's top 10 domestic box office champs this year also ranked on IMDb's Most-Anticipated Movies of 2017 list, demonstrating the predictive accuracy of IMDbPro's MOVIEmeter rankings and proving that these eagerly awaited movies did not disappoint fans," said Matt Kumin, head of IMDbPro. "IMDbPro has all the details on IMDb's Most-Anticipated Movies of 2018 as well as unrivaled information on other future blockbusters that are currently in development for our members to explore."

"While this year had its ups and downs at the box office, with last week's release of Star Wars: The Last Jedi and several other high-profile movies scheduled to open over the holidays, 2017 is on track to end with a bang," said Brad Brevet, IMDbPro's Box Office Editor. "Overall, while franchise films continued to thrive in 2017, female-driven features had an explosive impact on this year's box office with Beauty and the Beast hauling in more than $500 million domestically and Wonder Woman earning the coveted title of 2017's highest domestic-grossing superhero feature. The biggest live-action comedy this year was Universal's Girls Trip, which brought in more than $115 million at the domestic box office. Horror also had a huge impact this year including the record-breaking success of It as well as the success of smaller-budgeted films such as Get Out and Split."
