

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 25, 2021

I send my greetings to all those celebrating the 60th anniversary of the Federal Executive Board Network. This milestone is a testament to the dedication of our Federal Executive Board members and their unwavering commitment to our Nation.

With 28 boards serving over 800,000 civilian employees, the Federal Executive Board Network has formed the backbone of the Federal Government's efforts to develop our public servants and build interagency partnerships across America. By providing a forum to communicate information from Washington to the field and connecting public servants to one another and their communities, our Federal Executive Boards are a critical part of helping the Federal government fulfill our fundamental mission: serving the American people.

The hard work and perseverance of the Federal Executive Board Network has also played a crucial role in keeping our communities safe and healthy as we fight COVID-19. Federal Executive Boards have continued their important functions during the pandemic by working remotely and serving as convening forums for agency leaders to continue to discuss concerns, share best practices, and provide guidance on returning to the office safely.

Thank you for your tireless work, and congratulations again on this monumental occasion.
